

Safety Message

EUSAC

This quarter's message comes in the midst of another eventful winter for our industry, both locally and nationally. During major restorations AND routine maintenance and construction, we are routinely challenged when making decisions about how to accomplish our work. Be sure to apply the best safety practices and the applicable working rules, WISHA's Chapter 296-45 WAC and/or OSHA regulations as appropriate. These rules have evolved over several decades and have been written by experienced safety professionals including both labor and management representatives to help protect us from the inherent dangers of our work. Know your working rules and keep up with the changes as they occur. Also, please note that OSHA is expected to issue new updates to our electrical standards in the next few months so be sure to contact your safety representative for the latest information. When these updates are issued, they will make a great topic for both safety meetings and training as needed.

EUSAC welcomes comments, questions, and input from all interested members and parties. Please contact your local representative or safety professional.
